Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Monsoonal moisture will bring isolated thunderstorms over interior northwest California. Morning coastal cloudiness will give way to partly sunny skies most afternoons. Cooler temperatures will return to the interior in the coming week.

Medford Weather:

Shortwave activity will approach northern California this afternoon, but mid-level moisture will be lacking resulting in the majority of storms being isolated. On Sunday, the coverage of thunderstorms will be greater and more widespread. This isolated and scattered shower and thunderstorm pattern will persist over the area for most of next week as the upper low gradually moves towards the northern California coast.

Reno Weather:

Upper level disturbance interacting with a very moist and unstable air mass will produce widespread thunderstorms with frequent lightning and heavy rainfall this afternoon and evening, with flash flooding possible. Low pressure developing near the California coast will keep the threat for thunderstorms through much of the upcoming week.

San Francisco Weather:

Outside of some coastal drizzle, dry weather is forecast through next week. A stronger marine influence will return through the weekend with temperatures near or slightly below seasonal averages through at least early next week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Daily afternoon thunderstorms mainly over the mountains continue for the next week. Daytime highs will be above normal this weekend, then gradually cool to near and below normal next week.

Hanford Weather:

Scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms will continue over the high country of the southern Sierra Nevada through the weekend. Temperatures will remain seasonably warm during the next few days.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

There will be night through morning low clouds and fog in coastal and some valley areas through early next week, with temperatures near to slightly above normal. An upper low will bring a deeper marine layer Wednesday through Friday, with more extensive night through morning low clouds and fog west of the mountains and slightly below normal temperatures in most areas.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

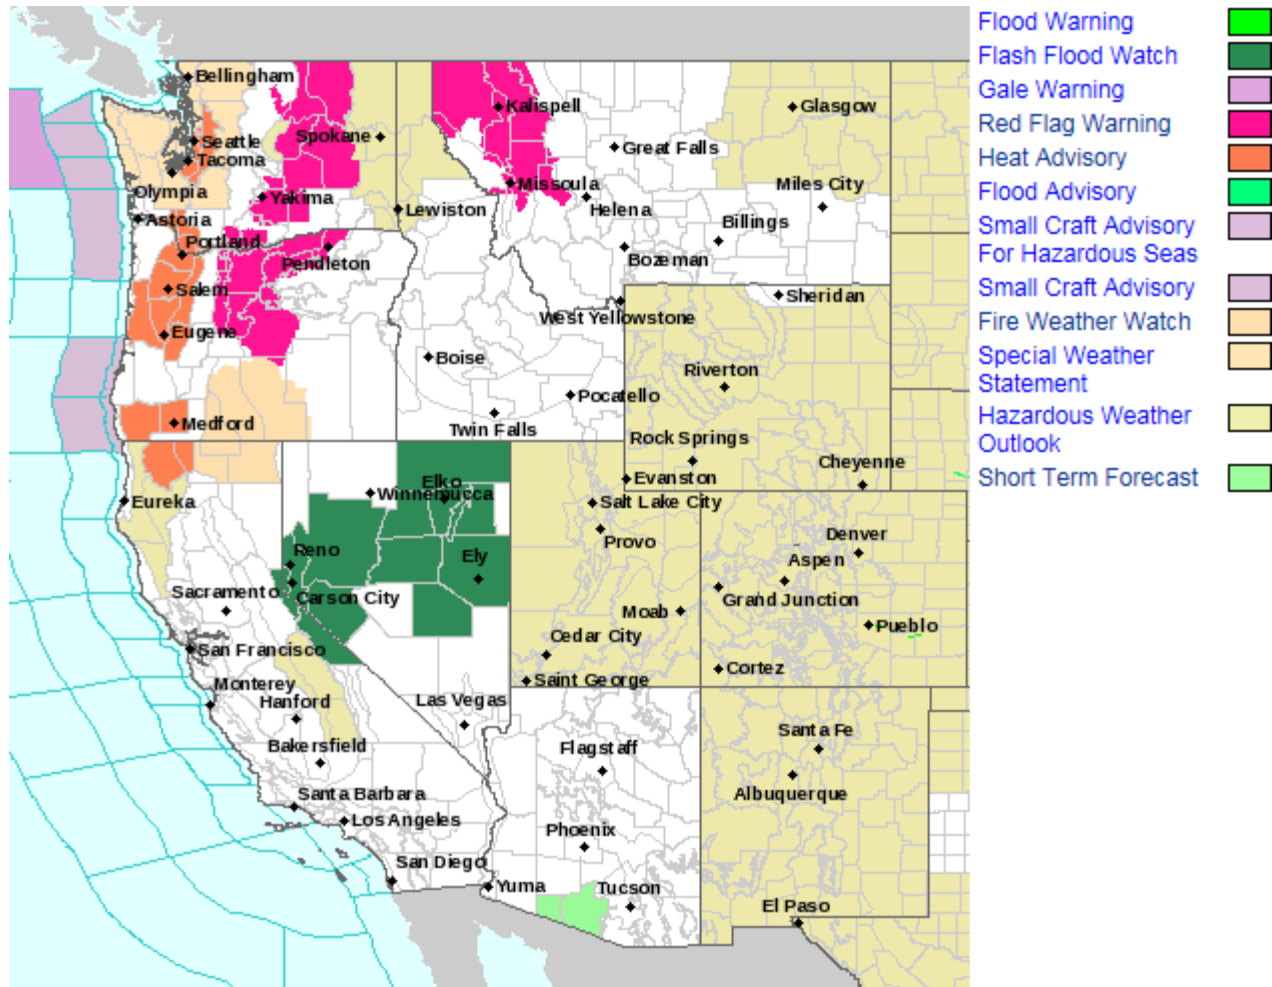

Through early next week, a low pressure system will remain off the California coast with high pressure over the interior southwest states. Far southern California will remain on the western fringe of greater monsoonal moisture to the east. This may bring some afternoon clouds to the mountains. As that low pressure system moves to the California coast the middle to latter part of next week, that will bring drier southwest flow aloft. The marine layer will be deeper than typical for early July with night and morning low clouds and patchy fog extending into the far inland valleys with slow or limited clearing near the beaches some afternoons.

Southeast California Weather:

Today the forecast area will be partly sunny with a slight chance of showers and thunderstorms this morning for portions of the region. From Sunday through much of next week, the forecast area will be partly sunny and cloudy, though mostly clear.

FEATURED TRAINING:

- MGT-315 Enhanced Threat and Risk Assessment: 21-22 July, 2015

The Critical Asset Risk Management course helps participants answer those questions by teaching critical components of risk management. Through a combination of lecture, facilitated discussion, and group activities, participants will learn how threats, vulnerabilities, and consequences determine risk, and are given an opportunity to practice the fundamentals of conducting vulnerability assessments by conducting on-site assessments of select local facilities. Additionally they will identify potential mitigation measures associated with their findings and work together to develop and present a risk assessment report.

- MGT-414 Advanced Critical Infrastructure Protection: 24 July, 2015

In this course participants will enhance their skills to formulate considerations for the resiliency of jurisdictional assets leveraging cross-sector partnerships. These considerations will enhance the whole community's ability to manage the risk associated with critical infrastructure protection efforts. The course will implement the National Preparedness Goal by facilitating the development of Resiliency Action Plans, involving all jurisdictional critical infrastructure partners. Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to increase infrastructure owner/operator participation in jurisdictional planning, organizing, equipping, training, and exercising critical infrastructure protection efforts.
